

In an automated teller machine having a function capable of discriminating paper currencies, the automated teller machine is operable in such a manner that a paper currency range which is to be handled by a main body of the own automated teller machine is made coincident with a paper currency range (furthermore, sort of paper currencies of paper currency storage safes, or cassettes) which may be handled by a paper currency deposit/withdraw mechanism (paper currency discriminating unit). Also, a centralized managing system can manage a plurality of the above-explained automated teller machines.